

The University of North Georgia Press is a department under the Office of the Vice President of Leadership & Global Engagement at The University of North Georgia.

The University of North Georgia Press, a scholarly, peer-reviewed press, is an extension of our sponsoring university, University of North Georgia. Our primary function is to promote education and research, with a special emphasis on innovative scholarship and pedagogy.

Our partnership with UNG provides a service-learning environment for students to gain real life experiences in publishing and marketing. These learning opportunities comprise (1) course work tied to UNG Press projects, and (2) internships. Course work immerse students in actual book production, from acquisitions to editing to editing to layout and design to marketing. Internships focus on editing and marketing; however, interns participate in all aspects of the press.

FLOODS AND FIRES

Dan Leach

“A beautifully-written, soul-shaking collection.”

George Singleton

*“Dan Leach’s debut collection of stories, Floods and Fires, heralds an exciting new voice in Southern fiction. Everything a reader could ask—fine writing, zany plots, and characters that strut off the page—is given generously in this collection.”*

Dale Ray Phillips, author of My People’s Waltz

ISBN: 978-1-940771-35-9

Paperback: $19.95

6 x 9 | 156 pp

Short Story Collection

Floods and Fires, the first collection of stories by Dan Leach, tests Marilynne Robinson’s assertion that “Families will not be broken.” In the title story, a father harbors his fugitive son from the town bully-turned-sheriff and meditates on suffering in small towns. In “Everything Must Go,” an estranged husband spots his ex-wife’s belongings at a garage sale and grapples with an onset of paranoia. In “Transportation,” a trailer park outcast uses wild acts of imagination to transcend his bleak existence. Wrestling against limitations that are Southern in aesthetic but universal in nature, the characters in Floods and Fires seek redemption in the face of hard times. Quirky, outlandish, but in the end emotionally poignant, Dan Leach’s stories follow imperfect people struggling against their circumstances, their histories, and, most importantly, themselves.

DAN LEACH’s stories have appeared in various literary journals and magazines, including The Greensboro Review, The New Madrid Review, and Appalachian Heritage. Born and raised in upstate South Carolina, he graduated from Clemson University in 2008 and has taught English in various schools across the state. He currently lives in Greenville with his wife and three children.

Political Science

Newly revised, The Basics of American Government offers a comprehensive overview of the American political system for students taking introductory courses in American national government and combines the best aspects of both a traditional textbook and a reader. The Basics of American Government is a collaborative effort among eight current and one former faculty members in the Department of Political Science & Criminal Justice at the University of North Georgia. Most of its chapters offer a piece of original scholarship as a case study bolstering the material in the chapter. Additionally, most chapters present a civic engagement-type exercise and discussion questions that are challenging and engaging, and help foster student participation in the political system. The purpose of this book is to offer a no-frills, low-cost, yet comprehensive overview of the American political system for students taking introductory courses in American national government.

COLLECTED ESSAY OF

JOHN WILLIAM CORRINGTON

Edited by Allen Mendenhall

“Allen Mendenhall’s tribute to Corrington is the next best thing to Resurrection this side of eternity.”

Richard Bishirjian

“This book is a rediscovery: Corrington is a fascinating figure in Southern letters, popular culture, and philosophical conservatism. Allen Mendenhall has done yeoman’s service in bringing these essays back to light.”

Essays

John William Corrington, once dubbed a “Southern Man of Letters,” is mostly known for his fiction, poetry, and screenplays. Having achieved fame for writing the screenplays for The Battle for the Planet of the Apes, Boxcar Bertha, Omega Man, and other films, Corrington also wrote philosophical, literary, and jurisprudential essays that are often overlooked. Corrington turned to screenwriting because he needed money, but the enormity of his intellect is evident in his essays. Corrington wrote about such wide-ranging issues as his beloved South, the humanities, law, jurisprudence, Gnosticism, and Eric Voegelin. Corrington is the most extraordinary “undiscovered” Southern philosopher never to have received the sustained attention he deserves. This book is the first to recover the profound and complex essays of this complicated man. It contains essays and lectures never before collected, and some have never been published. This edition is an indispensable introduction to Corrington’s philosophy.

ALLEN MENDENHALL is associate dean and executive director of the Blackstone & Burke Center for Law & Liberty at Faulkner University Thomas Goode Jones School of Law. He holds a J.D. from West Virginia University, LL.M. in transnational law from Temple University Beasley School of Law and Ph.D. in English from Auburn University. He edits the Southern Literary Review and has authored hundreds of publications in law reviews, peer-reviewed journals, magazines, newspapers, literary periodicals, and encyclopedias. His other books include Literature and Liberty (2014) and Oliver Wendell Holmes Jr., Pragmatism, and the Jurisprudence of Agon (2017). He lives in Auburn, Alabama, with his wife and two children.

TURN BACK BEFORE BAGHDAD

ORIGINAL FRONTLINE DISPATCHES OF THE GULF WAR BY AMERICAN AND BRITISH CORRESPONDENTS

Laurence Jolidon

“The late Laurence Jolidon compiled the best of the combat pool dispatches by dozens of talented reporters, and reprinted their raw pool reports. Contained here are extraordinary eyewitness accounts of that unique moment in American military history. This book is indispensable for any historian of the first Iraq War, or for any interested reader who is curious about how the press really covered the war.”

Five-Star Amazon Review

In the early morning hours of January 12, 1991, telephones rang in the rooms of a dozen or so newspaper and wire service reporters at the Dhahran International, the Meridian, and other hotels in Eastern Saudi Arabia.

War with the regime of Saddam Hussein over the oil province of Kuwait had become inevitable. The calls, telling the reporters to grab their gear and meet military public affairs officers in hotel lobbies, triggered the first media pools dispatched to cover Operation Desert Storm. For both the military and journalists, the pool system was viewed with misgivings. It was seen by many on both sides as the best of several bad options for reporting the coming war to the American people and the world.

Historians and casual readers will find here vivid texture of that unique time, the atmospherics of an era already fading from the American consciousness of MREs and Yellow Ribbons and all the attendant color and drama of American and British expeditionary troops in their hundreds of thousands transported to the exotic wastes of Arabia.

Jolidon’s work captures an important moment that will be studied by historians who examine the role of the media in wartime, and relations between the military and civilian reporters. Whatever history’s final judgment on the utility of the pool system, it is undeniable that the relationship between the Pentagon and the press has not been the same since.

LAURENCE JOLIDON passed away in August 2002, yet his legacy as an outstanding war reporter continues to influence the world of journalism. He served as a war correspondent on the ground during the Persian Gulf Wars. Before his death, he was the spokesperson for the NATO Peace Stabilization Force. He is also known for his book Last Seen Alive: The Search for Missing POWs from the Korean War, first published under his imprint Ink-Slinger Press in 1995.

OVER THE TOP

Arthur Guy Empey

Edited by David Scott Stieghan

“Empey’s Over the Top is a valuable read. With wry humor, this American turned British soldier relates in engaging fashion a tale otherwise filled with horror and gore, humanizing the troops in a way that takes the reader along for their terrible experience. Empey’s original work and Steighan’s editorial additions are an accessible way for the reader to better understand this ‘Great War’ which yet impacts our lives and for which we now observe the centennial.”

Military History

Over the Top was the only contemporary source written by an actual American participant in the war while the fighting took place. Hot off the press just as American troops were gearing up for war, this best-selling book provided a rare glimpse into the life of the common soldier in World War I. An overnight sensation, Empey’s candid and readable style made this book a “must read” book of its time. Here, almost 100 years later, we hope that modern readers will enjoy Over the Top as much as did the original audience.

Over the Top follows an American as he experiences and copes with training and combat alongside common British soldiers, “Tommy Atkins.” This new edition edited by David Scott Stieghan, US Army Infantry Branch historian, includes both original and new photographs and illustrations. The introduction acquaints readers with the original author, providing new insights into the man Empey was and his motivation for writing Over the Top. Stieghan contextualizes the historical setting and environment of the front line; he also annotates for the modern reader outdated terms and phrases.

DAVID SCOTT STIEGHAN is the United States Army Infantry Branch Historian at Fort Benning, Georgia. He has taught history at colleges in Texas, Tennessee, and Georgia and is currently the Military History Instructor for the U.S. Army Infantry. Stieghan has worked on twenty-eight Armed Forces Radio and Television Service Military Heritage Spots, eight History Channel shows, nine Outdoor Channel, and twenty-one Military Channel Shows as a technical advisor and Subject Matter Expert since 1999. He also served as technical advisor for the mini-series “Truman” on HBO and the mini-series “Rough Riders” on TNT.

TARGETING DISCRETION

A GUIDE FOR COMMAND STAFF, FRONTLINE OFFICERS, AND STUDENTS

Casey LaFrance, Ph.D.

“Targeting Discretion helps de-mystify the communication disconnect that leads to that disparity, and is a valuable tool in bringing each view closer in line with the other.”

Israel D. Segers, Assistant Chief, Alto Georgia Police Department

“LaFrance delivers a new way to think about discretion. . . managers will find it useful for enhancing communication between rank levels in police organizations.”

Paul F. Day, Detective, Virginia Beach, VA Police (Retired)

Dr. Casey LaFrance’s Targeting Discretion: A Guide for Command Staff, Front Line Officers, and Students, introduces his Target Model which is intended to be utilized when addressing the multifaceted nature of discretion in the police force. The Target Model is designed to be used in practical, real life situations in law enforcement as well as by scholars who wish to analyze which factors influence staff and officers most when implementing discretion. Based on extensive consultations with police agencies paired with the application of the Target Model, Dr. LaFrance wrote Targeting Discretion to help identify and improve communication issues between rank levels in each agency. Complimenting the Target Model, the book also offers step by step instructions, hypothetical scenarios for critical thinking exercises, and statistical information as useful resources. Whether it is used inside or outside of the classroom, Dr. LaFrance’s book is a beneficial resource for individuals seeking a refreshing outlook and study on discretion within the police force.

DR. CASEY LAFRANCE is an associate professor of Political Science at Western Illinois University. His research focuses on local law enforcement decision-making, particularly among county sheriffs and municipal police chiefs. When he is not adventuring with his family, Dr. LaFrance continues to research discretionary decision-making in law enforcement.

Fiction

As a child, Allen was like most other American boys, playing baseball and fantasizing about the major leagues. The one crucial ingredient missing: talent. The discovery of the opposite sex explodes the ballgame and he quickly foresakes his homerun heavy hitter hopes and focuses all his energy to become the focus of the pretty girls and the popular kids. Despite his efforts to stick out, he remains invisible.

Allen decides the best method for becoming visible is to become a college student, certain that his erudition, average though it may be, and his choice of adopting a Bohemian lifestyle will allow him to stand out from the hordes of other above average, carefully non-conformist young people attending college. Unfortunately, Allen Johnson remains anonymous.

When Allen is in his mid-twenties, he discovers one day that he has become the very antithesis of what he hoped to be. He works in a non-descript cubicle, lives in a tiny house in a subdivision of identical tiny houses near a small, invisible city in the Midwest, and has a wife and child whom he struggles to find time to see. In a final attempt to break out, Allen decides he must disrupt the pattern. This is the point at which Allen Johnson must ultimately devolve in order to emerge as the man who has it all: happiness.

TRANSITION AND TRANSFORMATION FOSTERING TRANSFER STUDENT SUCCESS

Stephen J. Handel, Ph.D. and Eileen Strempel, Ph.D.

A practical, hands-on guide for academic professionals to use to improve the lives of transfer students.

Transition and Transformation: Fostering Transfer Student Success highlights the experience of practitioners involved in the day-to-day work of serving students in a variety of institutional contexts: public and private, two-year and four-year. The three broad categories of this book address some of the most pressing issues by focusing on key aspects of the transfer process: strategic planning, curricular innovations and initiatives, and outreach and advising. Many of the articles recognize that transfer is a shifting landscape, and the most imaginative promising practices now emphasize deep collaboration, and shared implementation over the long-term. All of the practices shared evoke a general movement away from transactional gestures towards the building of genuine relational connections with transfer students.

Art Theory

The Use of Color in History, Politics, and Art, a collection of papers from the 2012 Arts & Letters Conference hosted by the University of North Georgia, explores how color can provide clues to the interpretation of history and politics, works of art, and literature. As ubiquitous as colors are to the human sensorium, a long tradition exists of dismissing them as superficial. Yet, an alternative aesthetic tradition explores how colors are valued for qualities—the primitive, the childlike, the sensual—that stand for a liberation from the dominant tradition. Such oppositions hint at the potential of color as a departure point to explore structures of thought in different cultural contexts.

The authors of this volume explore the role color can play, whether as abstract notion or considering particular colors, in the interpretation of culture, politics, and the arts.

NEW ARMY OFFICER'S SURVIVAL GUIDE

CADET TO COMMISSION THROUGH COMMAND

Levi Floeter

A guidebook for Army ROTC Cadets and newly commissioned Officers, written in plain vernacular and designed to provide a “one-stop-shop” to quickly answer common and basic unknowns such as: how do I find and move to my first duty station? Or, what are some good rules of thumb for meeting my new Chain of Command? Or, how do I counsel those who work for me?

Military

New Army Officer's Survival Guide: Cadet to Commission through Command is the advice-equivalent to a double espresso for junior Army officers; it's simple, it doesn't take long to get through, and it provides results. Floeter's crisp and clear writing style answers many of the questions and concerns that cadets and junior officers have as they enter a career in the U.S. Army, making this book a great complement current to Army doctrine and regulations.

The structure of the book provides an overview of Army ROTC, a detailed walkthrough of skills needed by Junior Officers across the Army, and some explanations of techniques and possible leadership styles or methods to utilize in common situations. Four Annexes: Useful gear for the field and office; officer branch and Basic Officer Leader Course information; common acronyms and phrases, and a list of each Punitive Article of the UCMJ wrap up the book for quick access and reference. New Army Officer's Survival Guide: Cadet to Commission through Command aids junior officers' success by blending Floeter's first-hand experiences from over forty-one months in two separate Company Commands to personally advise and cover many lessons that most officers learn the hard way.

LEVI J. FLOETER, following in his father's footsteps (RET Air Force) into a military career, commissioned as an Army Infantry Officer from Eastern Washington University in 2008. Almost immediately after graduating Airborne and Infantry School at Fort Benning, Floeter received orders to deploy as a Platoon Leader in support of Operation Enduring Freedom from October 2009 - July 2010. Since then, Floeter has held various positions as a Company X.O., Battalion Operations Assistant, Company Commander (on two occasions), and most recently serves as an ROTC instructor in the Military Science Program at the University of Washington. CPT. Floeter is married and is the father to one daughter.
